

Unfortunately, we have found that a significant number of pupils are using their phones inappropriately. Ultimately, this is a distraction to pupils' learning and, therefore, their outcomes in school. Their use to take pictures and videos, send messages, listen to music and post on social media, among other things, causes these distractions. The Government recognise the negative effect and in their latest update of their advice in 'Behaviour for Schools' they state that: "Allowing access to mobiles in school introduces complexity and risks, including distraction, disruption, bullying and abuse, and can be a detriment to learning."

Before the summer holidays, and at the start of this term, I gave assemblies to all Year groups and set them the goal of using their phones responsibly throughout September. If we do not see an improvement from all pupils with regard to this, the school will be left with no alternative than to ban the use of mobile phones on site. That is, on entering the school site in the morning phones would have to be turned off and put away. They would not be allowed out at any time or in any place. They could then be turned back on as pupils leave the school site at the end of the day. Any mobile phone seen during the day would be confiscated.

I would urge all parents/carers to have conversations with their child(ren) about appropriate phone use, and thank you in advance. I will update you at the end of September as required.

Your faithfully

John Edwards
Deputy Headteacher
